

Jennie Graves Bowling, 81, formerly from South Charleston died quietly at her home Thursday, December 26 in Elizabethtown, KY.

She is survived by her son, E. Rupert Bowling Jr., and his wife, Patti; a granddaughter, Melissa Gialdini and husband, Nick, of San Jose, California; a son, Duane H. Bowling, wife, Susan; a granddaughter, Jessica Goddard and husband, Ross; great-granddaughter, Adaline; a great-grandson, Cole; a granddaughter, Annie Jenkins, and husband, Adam; great-granddaughters, Ellie and Harper, from Rock Hill, South Carolina; daughter, Sarah S. Hart, husband Steve; grandson, Mac Lenihan, granddaughter, Alexandra Lanz, step grandson, Matthew Hart of Elizabethtown, KY; a sister, Judith Lovell and late husband, Frank Lovell from Charleston; sister, Lora Graves and husband, Bryan Dye, from Morgantown; and many nieces, nephews and cousins. In addition to her 20-year career as an Army officer's wife, Jennie was the executive secretary at United Methodist Charities, Charleston West Virginia, a residential aide at Lincoln Village Treatment Center in Elizabethtown; and an American Red Cross national volunteer in Fort Ord, California.

A private inurnment is planned in the Columbarium Wall at the Kentucky Veterans Cemetery-Central in Radcliff, with late husband, retired Lt. Col. Ernest R. Bowling.

Donations to Hosparus of Central Kentucky may be made online to hosparus.org or 800-264-0521.